

Linda Miller

Known for her direct communication style and touch of refreshing humor, Linda Miller is a consulting partner, trainer, and team facilitator with The Ken Blanchard Companies®. Whether training or facilitating, her direct and supportive style creates an effective and positive experience for participants. Linda partners with her clients to ensure that their programs are relevant and matched to what the team or the organization desires.

Whenever Linda is designing, training, or facilitating, she uses a customized and collaborative approach. When designing programs on team facilitation, she makes it clear that every team leader needs to be positioned strongly. Together, Linda and the client hand-pick activities to create the best environment for team building, onboarding of new team members, bringing teams together, and other team-focused learning experiences.

Linda has training and facilitation experience in a variety of industries, including automotive, banking, government, manufacturing, pharmaceutical, and retail, and universities and nonprofit organizations. Her specific areas of expertise are leadership coaching, team building and team dynamics, executive and high-potential acceleration, and team member and multi-team assimilation.

Linda is coauthor of Blanchard's First-time Manager program, which teaches the essential skills that every new manager must master in order to succeed in the workplace, and the newly revised Coaching Essentials® program. In addition, she has coauthored two books on coaching and has been featured in articles, blogs, and radio and television segments.

Linda holds two master's degrees and specializes in creating healthy dynamics and change in organizations. Linda was awarded an honorary doctorate for her contribution to the coaching profession.

One of Linda's favorite activities is moderating political debates. In 2008, 2010, and 2012, she moderated state legislative debates throughout Arizona. She plays golf and hikes in her spare time.

Testimonials

"Linda and I developed a global coaching program for our HR professionals. When facilitating, she always connects and engages with her clients. She is highly adept in keeping a balance between the coaching theory, learning techniques, practical examples, and skill practices. I would recommend Linda as a program designer or facilitator for any business."

—Eline Lenselink, Employee Engagement Manager

"Linda Miller was a tremendous asset to us as we were shaping the direction of our global management's coaching skills program. Her knowledge, flexibility, and experience in training design and facilitation were instrumental in creating an outstanding program."

—Elena Palumbo-Sergnese, Senior Manager of Learning Programs
